TO THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

LOUISVILLE Is to have a commercial convention. The purpose of this convention is to discuss ways and means to promote the growth of Louisville, and Kentucky, in material wealth and enterprise.

It is a fact that the State at large is not showing enthusiastic interest in the convention. The country merchants and the country press are not wasting their time and space in commenting upon it.

The reason for this apparent apathy on the part of the people out side of Louisvills is that they do not think that the promoters of the Louisville is the chief city of the State. Her power for assisting it decelorment of Kentucky is almost limitless. Were she to adopt s Louisville is the chief city of the State. Her power for assisting it the development of Kentucky is almost Innitiess. Were she to adopt it consistent course in aiding in the growth of the commonwealth every community would neet her more than half way, and the confidence that would result would give birth to a new era of progress.

Of late years, however, Louisville has adopted a very narrow policy. She gees on the "all hog" principle of Louisville first, Louisville alls, Louisville all the time. This policy might be a winner if it hypocrisy and sham it will prove a failure.

For a long time Louisville's shibboeth was "Patronize home industries." As Louisville is the commercial, social and political hear of the commonwealth it was thought that anything produced by Ken

For a long time Louisville's shibboleth was "Patronize home industries." As Louisville is the commercial, social and political heart of the commonwealth it was thought that anything produced by Kentucky capital, enterprise and labor within the confines of the State could be classed as the product of "home industries," and those who were interested rejoiced at this manifestation of local and State pride. They expected and predictod great things.

Here in Breekenridge county we expected that our rock asphalt would be included. We thought that Louisville would compet the Board of Public Works to let down the bart that prevented the competition of our product with that of the Barber Asphalt Monopoly. We thought that the plans and specifications governing the letting of asphalt contracts would be so revised as to give a clear field and no favor. Our people congratulated themselves and Louisville. They congratulated themselves because they realized that our rock asphalt is the best paving material on earth and is the cheapest to put down. This being true, they for that by securing furl play in Louisville they could get it elsewhere, and the result would be a demand for Breckenridge county's chief mineral product that would result in the development of the county and the enhancement of property values.

They congratulated Louisville because they felt she was freeing herself from the edium of having killed, in her own house, the child of her energy and capital. In her old attitude she presented the spectale of a Kentucky city discouraging the world against using a Kentucky product, and when her Board of Public Works insisted on all bidders on asphalt paving the Hilling every requirement of the plans and specifications governing the letting of contents for asphalt paving the Hilling every requirement of the plans and specifications governing the letting of contents for asphalt contents for a specific product, and when her Board of Public Works inested on all bidders on aephalt pawing fulfilling every requirement of the plans and specifications governing the letting of contracts for aephalt construction, they furnished the competitors of Kentucky rock asphalt companies with a club with which to kill their only honest and formidable opponent.

But Breckenridge county was disappointed in her expectation.

Breckenridge county is not alone in this matter. Every county from the mountains to Green River has been offended by the stand taken by Louisville's city officials.

A the city folks did not take their own slogan, "Patronize home industries." very seriously their country cousing realized the hollow industries," very seriously their country cousins realized the hollow mockery of the thing and declined to be the victims of a delusion and a

In the past year a large amount of the trade of the retail merchant In the past year a large amount of the trade of the retail merchants

'n this section has been diverted from Louisville to Cincinnati. The reason for this is that the merchants whose interests have been affected by Louisville's plan of playing fast and loose with its tributary territory decline to trust it any longer, and would rather patronic a city whose people make no professions of friendship for them. They have been bunco-d, cajoled, fooled by Louisville long enough and are tired of it.

Commercial conventions, Boards of Trade and other institutions will be powerless to repair the broken bond of union. The divorce of the city and the country is a fact, and the breach is widening day by day.

This is not said in bitterness. It is not said with satisfaction. It

This is not said in bitterness. It is not said with satisfaction. It is as als fact—a painful one to relate.

Breckenridge, and every other county in Kentucky would delight in working harmoniously with Louisville in the creation of a greater Louisville and a greater Kentucky.

All that is needed to bring about union and concord is frank, open honesty. It is consistent to demand that this honesty and sincerity be shown by deeds—"by their works ye shall know them"—and when Louisville's numicipal officers remove the ban against Kentucky asphalt they will have performed the test necessary to prove their honesty and sincerity.

Louisville has degenerated to the extent that some of her best cittens have become her applogists. They know that civic and Louisville has degenerated to the extent that some of her best citizens have become her apologists. They know that civic and municipal virtue in that good old town has sunk to a very low ebb. They are loyal to their city and are putting the best face that they can to the evil, but the mask does not conceal from the State at large the hiddeous features that exist.

As a friend of Louisville we ask that her good people get together and clean out the Augean stables. It will be a fearful task, and it will raise a terrible stink, but better that than festering corruption.

Were Louisville like Dallas, Texas, she would lend a hand to every enterprise calculated to promote the best interests of the State. If rock asphalt were discovered in the county adjoining Dallas the citizens of that place would never rest until all the streets of their city were paved with Texas apphalt. This accomplished they would uge the rest of the world to use it. The same is true of any other home product she could utilize. This is the reason why Dallas forges shead while Louisville stands still.

stands still.

A commercial convention in Dallas, Texas, arouses the whole State, and no town considers itself too unimportant to be represented. Every community in Texas knows that the business men of Dallas are sincere, excrets and consistent. They know when these business men get together something will result, and all of them hasten to get under the branches when the plum tree is shaken.

Comparisons are odious, it is true; but if Louisville would adopt Dallas methods, be true to herself and to others, her commercial conventions would attract more than passing notice.

This criticism may seem severe, but it is made with the kindest intent and the best motives. Kentucky is about to have one of the brightest and most prosperous years in her history, and if Louisville desires to reap the benefits she must adopt a new policy. When she does, the State will hold out the right hand of fellowship, and will once more take her back into full confidence and extend to her all the favors that kitship merits.

more take her back into full confidence and extend to her all the favors that kinship merits.

Now is the accepted time to do this thing. Let the instigators of the commercial convention take up the question and handle it fear-lessly. It is not a political question. It is a matter that pertains to the public weal, and should come up under the head of "for the division code". city's good.
